On display in prototype form, Emily's AM 317 cubicle bedder uses a 17hp Lombardini engine for power.

With a top speed of 15kph, drive to the three wheels is hydrostatic and the nimble bedding machine has a turning circle of just 1.35m (4ft 5in).

The 682-litre capacity and 1.1-metre-wide hopper tips forward for loading, and is capable of blowing chopped straw or sawdust into cubicles.

Fitted with a rotating brush and a leading muck scraper, the company is currently contemplating a range of other front attachments to further increase its versatility.

The version on show, which goes on sale in a couple of months, is expected to cost about €20,000 (£14,600).
